

Contributors

Fran Brearton is Lecturer in English at Queen's University Belfast. She is author of The Great War in Irish Poetry (OUP, 2000) and co-editor of Last before America: Irish and American Writing (Blackstaff, 2001). She is currently working on a full-length study of Michael Longley's poetry for Bloodaxe Books.

Scott Brewster is Senior Lecturer in English at University of Central Lancashire, and a member of the National Council of the British Association for Irish Studies. He is co-editor of Ireland in Proximity: History, Gender, Space (Routledge, 1999) and is currently writing Lyric for the Routledge Critical Idiom series.

Michael Breen is Head of Department and Senior Lecturer in Media & Communication Studies at Mary Immaculate College, University of Limerick, Ireland, and a director of the Centre for Culture, Technology and Values. His research has focused on media construction of social issues, media representation of marginalised groups, and the role of the media in forming public opinion.

Tommy P. Christensen has taught history at University of Copenhagen, but is now Curator in the Department of Documentation, Malmö Museer, Sweden.

Eoin Devereux is Lecturer in Sociology at University of Limerick, Ireland. His latest book, Understanding The Media (2003), has just been published by SAGE (London). His research interests are in media representations of poverty, exclusion, class and ethnicity.

Irene Gilsenan Nordin is Senior Lecturer in English and Director of the Centre for Irish Studies (DUCIS), at University College Dalarna, Sweden. She is author of Crediting Marvels in Seamus Heaney's Seeing Things (Uppsala, 1999), and is currently writing The Element of the Spiritual in the Poetry of Eiléan Ni Chuilleanáin (Edwin Mellen, 2004), and editing Metaphors of the Body and Desire in Contemporary Irish Poetry.

Billy Gray is Senior Lecturer in English at Luleå Technical University College, Sweden. He comes from the Shankill district of West Belfast, and is a graduate of University of Ulster. He wrote his doctoral thesis on 'The Influence of Islamic Mysticism on the Work of Doris Lessing', and is currently working on a research project entitled 'The Aesthetics of Ageing'.

Heidi Hansson is a Research Fellow at Umeå University, Sweden. She has previously published in the fields of postmodern romance, and nineteenth-century women's cross-gendered writing. She is author of Romance Revived: Postmodern Romances and the Tradition (1998), and is currently involved in a research project on nineteenth-century Irish women's prose, beginning with the work of Emily Lawless.

Elin Holmsten is a doctoral student at Uppsala University, Sweden, and is writing her PhD thesis on the poetry of Medbh McGuckian. Holmsten is also Lecturer in English at DUCIS, Dalarna University Centre for Irish Studies, and at the English Department, University College Dalarna, where she teaches courses in British and Irish Literature.

Thomas Korthals is an English teacher at a school in Germany. He has studied English and Modern History at the Universities of Bochum and Limerick. His main research interest is Irish history and its representation in Irish literature.

Dorte Kulle is a M.Phil. by Research from the Department of Ethnography and Social Anthropology, University of Aarhus, and a research associate with the Belfast think tank Democratic Dialogue.

Åke Persson is Senior Lecturer in English at University College Trollhättan/Uddevalle, Sweden. He is author of Betraying the Age: Social and Artistic Protest in Brendan Kennelly's Work (Gothenburg English Studies, 2000), and editor of Journey into Joy: Selected Prose (Bloodaxe, 1994) and This Fellow with the Fabulous Smile (Bloodaxe, 1996). He is currently engaged in research on Roddy Doyle's fiction and film adaptations of literary texts.

Maryna Romanets teaches in the Department of English, University of Lethbridge, Canada. She is currently working on a book entitled Displaced Subjects, Anamorphic Texts, Reconfigured Visions: Improvised Traditions in Contemporary Women's Literature.

Nils Arne Sørensen is Senior Lecturer in Modern European History, Syddansk Universitet, Odense, Denmark. His current research interests are the cultural impact of the First World War, cultures of commemoration and the

Contributors

Cultural history of the Cold War. Among recent publications are Briterne og Europa (Copenhagen: DUPI, 1997), and Gads Historieleksikon (Copenhagen: GAD, 2001; rev. ed. forthcoming).